

Goodbye...

Dear Readers,

Today marks the end of a great adventure. I launched the International Litigation Blog in November 2016. After more than 160 blogposts covering all sorts of issues relating to international litigation and arbitration, I have decided to stop the blog.

Writing for this blog has always been a great source of satisfaction. However, I am heading towards new professional challenges which will claim my full attention in the coming months.

I want to express my thanks to all the readers who showed an interest in the blog over the last 6 years and I sincerely hope that you enjoyed reading the blogposts as much as I enjoyed writing them.

The blog will remain online for another few months so you will still have a chance to consult past articles.

Best regards,

Quentin
